Obesity—An Ever Enlarging Problem

Obesity is the number one nutritional problem and number one health threat of pets today. A recent study done by the Association for Pets Obesity reported over 45% of dogs and 58% of cats are overweight or obese.

Common health risks of obesity are: heart disease, hypertension, (high blood pressure) respiratory disease, diabetes, liver disease, degenerative joint disease, and many forms of cancer. Overweight pets are often uncomfortable, it may be hard to breath, hard to walk, they are low in energy and interact less with family and house mates.

Just like people an overweight pet should get a physical exam and the vet will make recommendations on the diet program, which will include regular exercise. Blood-work may be recommended as certain diseases (hypo-thyroidism) will cause pets to be overweight.

Talk to your vet if you suspect your pet is overweight!

FOZZIE - Here is Her Success Story

Fozzie: From severe neglect to a "forever happy home"!

Most of us are familiar with the rescue of 85 Husky and Irish Wolfhounds in July of 2010 in Saskatoon. We at TLC volunteered our time and groomed some of the severely neglected and matted dogs, which had to stay at the SPCA until the court case was over.

Fortunately, all of the dogs, with the exception of Fozzie, found homes soon after their rescue. Fozzie was in such bad condition that he had to be fostered over a longer period of time.

However, Fozzie eventually made it too!

We had the privilege to do her FINAL grooming just before she moved to her "FOREVER HOME" in Ontario the week before Christmas 2010.

We are glad we were part of a happy ending to a sad story!
